JESH - Joint Excellence in Science and Humanities

Descripción:

JESH is a stimulation program of the OeAW offering scientists from Austria the opportunity to establish new international contacts at the highest level without any restrictions concerning research fields. Outgoing scientists will be able to work with outstanding researchers from selected countries.

The purpose of JESH is to foster collaborative research focused on highly innovative ideas by junior scientists from Austria for which no standard funding stream is available.

We do not expect all JESH projects to succeed, because these should be projects that have high risk, but we are very interested in proposals which, if successful, could have a significant payoff in terms of advancing our knowledge. A further goal is to support work that has the potential, if the initial work is successful, in enabling subsequent funding from other agencies, for example but not limited to the ERC.

Eligible home institutions are all OeAW research institutes and institutes of Austrian public universities. Each eligible home institution may support a maximum of two JESH applications per call. The pre-selection of candidates for application lies in the responsibility of the head of the institute.

Beneficios:

For outgoing scientists to research institutions in the respective focus countries research visits between a minimum of two months (60 calendar days) and a maximum of six months (180 calendar days) can be financed. Other project costs or overheads cannot be reimbursed.

Continuation of already existing cooperations cannot be funded.

Requisitos:

JESH is open to scientists who completed their PhD / doctoral degree within the last 10 years and have a residence and an affiliation with an eligible university or research institution in Austria. There is no restriction regarding the nationality of the participant.

Only one application per person can be accepted.
In case the JESH funding is granted, OeAW employees are obliged to apply for a leave of absence ("Karenzierung") for the duration of the stay abroad; this is also recommended for all other recipients of a JESH grant.

Potential host institutes are universities or research institutions
